In Some Cities Common Building May Be Kept for Preservation of Records.

Tennessee, report receipt of letters asking advice about disposition by churches of the war memorials made and gathered by them. If these let-ters are correct indicators, churches have gone into the matter of collectremarkable thoroughness. Some say they have excellent photographs of every man enlisting, their life stories. and their relation to the churches.
To others have been sent, or there ave promised to be sent, or there have promised to be sent, souvenire from the front, including parts of squipment of destroyed submarines, flags in great variety and numbers, hags in great variety and numbers, and especially letters that have been written to churches by French and English people who became acquainted with their men, entertained them in their hongs, or visited them while iii, perhaps dying.

These secretaries and ministers admit themselves unable adequately to suggest action, beyond writing in all cases to preserve the records at all azards until some common purpose develops. All agree that churches must keep war records, and place them where they may be seen by the public. Advice given so far includes the building by the church of a room, to be known as a "war room," in which records are to be kept. Some cities have canvassed the matter of a common building for these records, including those from the churches, the planting of trees as memorials has been proposed, but the placing of tablets on church while is not astroned, because of the effect upon worshippers.

Inmate Praises New County Institution For Cleanliness and Safety.

Sentenced to 18 months' imprisor ment and already having served more than five months behind steel hars that slways remind and torture, is not enough to shake Vernon R. Chum-bley's grafitude for the sanitary conditions at the El Pane county fall Since his arrest last June and his sub-sequent conviction the following Oc-tober, for obtaining money on false pretense, he has lived in a semblance of freedom constituted whally by a norrow corrilor 40 feet long, walled up on one side by stout bars and on the other by a series of barred colls: and each night-and each night was long, from six oclock in the morning until six at night—his life's existence was in one of the penned up cells. Yet withal he retains the unsimkrable opinion that the county jati is a proud stranger toward the common opinion that the country but it a proud stranger toward the common enemy, uncleanliness.

"We receive criminals of all sorts" he said, "from the extremes of victousness to the lowest degralations of illiterary and squalor, but each one, directly after estiming the prison tank, is given a bath; his denuded body next is sprayed with disinfectant, uninjuriously, as are his ciothes before being returned to him. Then he is given a cell with four disinfected blunkers, and a mess kit consisting of a tray, cup and spoon, all sterilized. The rules of the institution are read to him for his strict observance, after which, if the time is day, he is released into the exercise corridor, 40 feet long.

The array of cells on each floor, though it is behind a triple arrangement of steel bark is next the outside scales of the building with a great ruidity of windows for liberal light. There is a thermometer in every corridor, which registers 70 degrees unfallingly. And at night an electric light shines down from the celling into every cell.

El Paso Gas Company Appeals to Fairness

The following excerpt from the report of the President of the National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissioners (representing all the State Commissions of the United States) at their annual convention in October 1917, which report was unanimously approved, is

"Street railroads, gas and electric companies, warehousemen, and other utilities, as a whole, have not enjoyed the increase in business which has come to most of our steam railroads. To the applications of these utilities for authority to charge higher rates based on large increases in operating expenses frequently without commensurate increases in the volume of business, the various stale commissions must give prompt and systematic consideration. In a number of instances, higher rates have already been authorized and in other cases increases must hereafter be allowed. In passing on these applications, however, careful consideration must be given by all parties to the question whether it is fair and just that the entire abnormal burden which has been caused by the war should be shifted from the public utility to its consumers who largely must pay increased prices for everything they buy without in many cases themselves receiving a compensating increased salary or wage. Is it not fair to ask that the public utilities, instead of seeking permission to shift the entire increased costs, shall share with their customers the burden caused by the war."

The El Paso Gas Company is not attempting to shift the entire increased costs to the public. We are asking for an increase which will not cover forty percent of our operating expenses alone. With an increased cost of 40c per thousand cubic feet, not considering interest, we are asking for 15c per thousand cubic feet. We submit that our request is fair as demonstrated below.

The following comparison on ten months operation in 1918 with ten months in 1917 shows our present conditions:

COMPARATIVE INCOME EL PASO GAS COMPANY TEN MONTHS ENDING OCTOBER 31, 1918-1917

Physical Investment and Working Capital, $1,624,664.01 $1,375,401.31 ., 295,244.36 , 313,489.48 ($18,245.12) 696 taxes, depreciation at the rate of 3% per 242,279,16 195,277.69 47,001.47 24% Balance for Return on Investment..... 118,211.79 (65,246.59) 55%

We have in ten months this year, failed by $15,627.65 to earn our interest charges, and our losses are much heavier toward the end of the period. We are $83,874.08 behind the same period last year, and last year we earned only the minimum amount allowed by law.

The increases in some of our expenses in a year and a half have been

Taxes 62 1-207 Labor—Wages 30%

As a result of these increases, the cost of gas delivered at your home or place of business has increased 40c per thousand cubic feet.

Such a state of affairs, you will readily appreciate, is rapidly leading us to bankruptcy and ruin, and we must have relief.

The increased revenue which we would receive, when the relief we have asked of the City Council is granted, would amount to $42,000.00 per year. This is only one-half the loss already sustained by our Company in ten months, compared with last year. In other words, even when the increase becomes effective, the Company will sustain the greater part of the loss, due to the increased expenses, and will then have only enough to pay interest on its debt, which it is not earning
